Evaluate Your Body of Work

How would you now respond to the following questions?

- Are you in the right company doing the right things?

- Is there an opportunity to grow and change within the firm?

- Do you need to look outside of your company to get what you're looking for?

- Perhaps it's bigger than that?

- Has the industry around you changed in a way that gives you less satisfaction or confidence that you can maximize your professional opportunities?

- Are there other things that you've always dreamed about doing?

Here are some more questions to consider:

- Is there a burning need to reset and redefine your professional path?

- Is there an opportunity to realign your role with the enhanced understanding of what you love to do and what you are best at?

- What's your magic?

- Is it being fully exploited so that you will be thrilled to continue your current career journey, or do you need to pivot now and build a plan to get to a new and more appropriate professional destination for the next phase of your career?

To pull it all together, we are going to do a personal evaluation that will crystalize things at another level. Here's what I want you to do as the next step in our process.

1. Make a series of observations (O), by writing in detail where you are in your job/ career. What have you learned, and what do you know to be true about your current and recent professional experience?
2. Under these statements, frame your magic (M) in a declarative sentence.
